Protect the ones you love

We often take for granted the simple things in life, like waking up to a new day and seeing the people you love, dreams you envisaged of your future together and cherishing those special moments that made you smile.

Moments have the power to transform your life through a chain of events and decisions we make...But what if sudden cardiac arrest was to affect your family? Would you know what to do? Would you have the tools to respond effectively? Would you want to know what happened?

Sudden cardiac arrest can happen to anyone, anywhere, at any time and the reality is, most cardiac arrests occur at home

What is sudden cardiac arrest?

When sudden cardiac arrest happens, the heart stops pumping blood around the body. At that point, you have only minutes to help save someone's life.

Being prepared and confident to respond in those first few minutes of an event is critical. To help save a life, someone nearby firstly needs to recognise that a sudden cardiac arrest is occurring and then quickly jump into action by calling emergency services, starting CPR, and applying an automated external defibrillator (AED).

CellAED® is the device that can coach you how to perform CPR and provide a small electrical shock to the heart to start it beating normally again. But CellAED for life™ is more than just the AED that sits on your wall until such an event occurs.

Having a personal CellAED® is only the beginning

Membership Benefits

Be Ready

Most out-of-hospital cardiac arrests happen in the home, yet until now, very few AEDs were for personal use. Most existing AEDs are found in public places like shopping centres and airports, but sadly, too often they're not maintained and when called into use, they don't work because the electrode gel pads had dried out or the battery was depleted.³

Have peace of mind that your CellaAED® is always ready for use. If sudden cardiac arrest strikes, CellAED for life™ is designed to help ensure your CellaAED® is functioning and ready for use.

Internet of Medical Things (IoMT) enabled[†]

Your CellaAED® is a smart medical device that periodically connects to the cellular network every 30 days to check the status of your device. We'll send you email updates including the readiness of your battery and the storage temperature of your CellaAED®. If we observe data outside of determined thresholds we'll let you know that too. Most importantly, we'll remind you when your shelf-life is nearing expiry to confirm the details of your next CellaAED® delivery and ensure you've always got a working CellaAED® ready for use.

Priority Replacement Service

We'll reserve your place in the manufacturing queue for your new CellaAED® and contact you to take delivery before the shelf life expiry of your old one - and you simply return the old one in the same packaging. In the event of your CellaAED® being used in a sudden cardiac arrest, you'll also skip the queue.

Priority Support and Data Access Service

You and your family will also have access to priority support services after using your CellaAED® in the event of a sudden cardiac arrest - so contact us any time and we'll gladly assist.

[†] Cellular coverage is not required for product to function. This does not replace the need for you to carry out your Monthly Product Inspection Checklist. It will be time to have your CellaAED® replaced when you observe the green LED on the front of your CellaAED® change to amber.

Get Answers

There are often questions left unanswered for the individual and their family after a sudden cardiac arrest. Too often the responder(s) who jumped into action don't learn the outcome. When the patient arrives in hospital their medical team is starting from scratch with no clear understanding of the heart rhythm or the cause of the arrest. The patient themselves may never know the cause of their sudden cardiac arrest.

Personally Registered

Each CellaED® comes off the manufacturing line and is individually registered via its unique identifier code so that we can directly communicate with you about the data received from your CellaED®.

If your CellaED® is used on an individual in cardiac arrest, the data during the event can be captured (such as heart rhythm analysis, number of defibrillation cycles and whether defibrillation was delivered). This data is stored on the device and, upon deactivation, uploaded to the cloud, offering the opportunity for some information to be provided to medical professionals.

Access the Data

As a CellAED for life™ member we'll waive the fee to access the event data collected by your CellaED® when used. This may help support the medical team in their clinical decisions or rehabilitation program. You may be one step closer to truly knowing what happened during the event and be in the position to offer some key answers.

Connecting Responder and Survivor

There is no better feeling than closure with CellAED for life™. You don't have to be left wondering what happened. We'll assist with connecting members and their family who are responders or survivors - often considered a valuable step in the rehabilitation journey.

In about 30-40% of cases, doctors cannot explain what caused the sudden cardiac arrest in a patient⁴
